Background

What is FAIR Ottawa?

The Foundation Against Intolerance and Racism (FAIR) is a nonpartisan, nonprofit organisation with over one hundred chapters and more than thirty-five thousand members across Canada and the United States. More details can be found on the organisation's website www.fairforall.org.

FAIR is dedicated to advancing civil rights and fundamental freedoms for all Canadians, and promoting a common culture based on fairness, understanding, and humanity. Recognizing Canada as a beautiful mosaic of diverse cultures and people, FAIR supports pro-human beliefs that appreciate the unique identities and common humanity of every single person, regardless of their viewpoints or immutable traits such as skin colour, ancestry or ethnicity.

The FAIR Ottawa chapter was formed in April 2022 and meets twice a month. Its activities are focused on promoting critical thinking, free inquiry, open debate and a common culture based on fairness, understanding, and humanity in Ottawa's schools, workplaces and municipal government.

Why we did the survey

The purpose of the survey is to solicit the views of candidates running for election as trustees of the Ottawa-Carleton District School Board on questions that are important to FAIR members. Through reporting each candidate's views, FAIR Ottawa aims to help voters decide who to support in the October 24th election. FAIR does not endorse or support any candidate for political office.

How we conducted the survey

Creating the survey

At the first FAIR Ottawa meeting in August of this year a set of guiding questions was determined by the membership. These questions were then refined by a smaller working group, incorporating feedback from members and creating the final survey which is displayed in appendix one at the end of this document. The survey was hosted on a section of the FAIR website where candidates were invited to fill out the survey and submit their responses.

Contacting candidates

Candidates were contacted using the information from the City of Ottawa's website of Certified and acclaimed candidates and registered third party advertisers (link). Candidates were invited to complete the survey by email on Wednesday August 31st, 2022. All but four candidates had an email address listed. Two weeks after sending the first email, all those who had yet to provide a response were contacted by telephone. Twelve phone calls were made in total. If candidates picked up the call they were reminded of the email and asked to fill out the survey. If they did not pick-up, a message was left with the same information.

How results are being presented

The information gathered from the candidates is being presented exactly as it was submitted through the surveying tool. The results below display all the information that was collected. FAIR Ottawa did not change or edit the responses in any way. The aim in presenting the responses this way is to accurately and faithfully represent what the candidates submitted.

In order to ensure the survey responses are useful to voters they are organised by school board zone. Included are the names of primary and secondary schools within the zone as they are displayed on the school board's website. There is a list of candidates, in alphabetical order for that zone, along with information on whether or not the candidate responded to the survey. After the list of candidates for a zone is each of the questions in the survey and the responses candidates provided. If the candidate left a response field blank, the results don't show anything for that question.

What motivates you to serve on the school board (i.e., why are you running)? Is there a particular issue about which you are passionate that is part of your motivation to serve?

Ashley Darling

I am running for school board trustee to bring the voice of an educator to the table. I have a Bachelor of Education (Primary/Junior) and a degree in Child Studies. I have taught in the OCDSB, in London, UK, Kobe, Japan, and I am currently teaching ESL online.

With major disruptions over the last three academic years, we need to put a heavy emphasis back into education, particularly STEAM and language arts. While some students thrived with online learning, many others fell behind for a variety of reasons. As a board, we need to devote time, focus and resources to ensuring students are meeting or exceeding the expectations set out by the Province.

I want to see the board's Exit Outcomes upheld across the board, ensuring students are given every opportunity to develop and hone the characteristics and skills outlined.

I want to see parents continue to be included in the school community, as has been encouraged for many, many years. Parents entrust their children to the OCDSB, and we need to make sure that is never taken lightly.

You can read more about what I hope to see come out of my term as OCDSB Trustee for Zone 2 at www.trusteedarling.ca.

Alysha Aziz

I am running for School Board Trustee for Zone 2 because I believe Ottawa deserves representatives that are passionate and dedicated to working towards the best possible outcomes for our communities. You can learn more on my website alysha2022.com

When it comes to "potentially controversial subjects and language", I feel that, if age appropriate, parents should be notified of the upcoming topic and be permitted to 'opt out' if it is contrary to their belief system. As the largest board in Ottawa, the OCDSB has families from all walks of life, and it is important that each family is treated with dignity and respect to their faith, culture, and/or beliefs.

That being said, when it is presented it, it needs to be done in such a way that students are still given the opportunity to think critically, being encouraged to take time to think about the subject matter, ask questions, form their own ideas and opinions without being told they must think one way or another.

What motivates you to serve on the school board (i.e., why are you running)? Is there a particular issue about which you are passionate that is part of your motivation to serve?

Kevin Wright

The top two priorities I have are:

- creating an inclusive and positive school climate that promotes staff engagement and student achievement
- ensuring effective stewardship of the board's resources

What inspired me to run for the trustee position is a solid belief, based on years of listening to similar testimonies from teachers, ECE staff, and school administrators, that the people in the school system are passionate about what they do and they are skilled in their craft, but the system gets in its own way. Through past opportunities I have had as a professional engineer, and in various governance roles, I've concluded that the cost of taking shortcuts and the push to achieve more of the same outcomes with less of the necessary resources is a predictable set of diminishing returns followed by long term deterioration in quality.

Ultimately, my view is:

- The school system establishes the environments which foster growth and creativity for students and staff.

- The culture of each school is central to the culture of our local communities each and every day
- The energy and passion our teachers and staff have for educating will directly shape the energy and passion our students have for learning
- The commitment our future leaders will have for our society is currently being forged by the commitment we have to our students

I'm running because I believe in making change and introducing new perspectives to the Board of Trustees. As someone who graduated high school last year, I know what students need in order to achieve their best results. My main priorities include tackling the climate crisis, empowering the student voice and advancing public education.

What motivates you to serve on the school board (i.e., why are you running)? Is there a particular issue about which you are passionate that is part of your motivation to serve?

Keith de Silvia-Legault

I am a member of the LGBTQ+ community and one of my motivators is making sure school is a safe place for all students, my remaining top three motivators are:

Student Advocacy: Making sure students are stakeholders in their education, when students are taking part in the decision making process, they will enjoy learning more and therefore they will be retaining more.

Mental Health: Our schools right now lack proper resources for students experiencing mental illness, learning disabilities or neurodiversity, I want to improve mental health in schools on all fronts, for students and for staff.

School Equity: In Zone 6 particularly there is a large wealth disparity, both the highest income and lowest income neighbourhoods in the city are in Zone 6, so we see a lot of schools that suffered immensely through the pandemic, school councils fell apart and now student's are missing out on some great school memories. We are also seeing the board continuing to close schools in this Zone while new neighbourhood developments are built every few years meaning more families, a lot of our schools parking lots are filled with portables, which is no place for a child to be learning.

Lyra Evans

I am running to make systemic change, because I believe that society needs passionate people to get involved; to leave the world a better place for our children than we received it from our parents. My policy positions have been profoundly influenced by my experience as a homeless teenager, an experience which motivated me to get involved in activism, and by extension politics. I believe there are better systems possible for those struggling and in need, and I want to help build a society where the vulnerable aren't abandoned and left falling through the cracks.

My goal as an OCDSB Trustee is to identify and rectify the structural and systemic issues at the school board which could negatively impact student well-being or academic potential.

Shannon Boschy

My central concern is the proliferation of identity politics in schools. If the trajectory of escalating tensions, division and toxicity that have affected the universities in Canada spread to the public school system and entrench themselves, we are creating long-term divisions in Canada.

I'd like to be part of confronting this in the public square

Anthony Hope

I am running for the position of OCDSB Trustee in Zone 6 because I believe in the uplifting power that strong public education has on building leaders of good character and integrity. I am seeking to ensure the quality of our public education is preserved and to be an advocate for students, parents and school district staff.

It is incredibly important that all students feel safe in school, if a student does not feel safe in school, their education will suffer, so we need to make sure the every student, no matter their race, gender, sexual orientation, religion, ethnicity, or any other immutable characteristics feels safe in the classroom, the hallway, the library, the cafeteria, and the playground.

Shannon Boschy

Re: Question - Potentially controversial subjects and language, even when age appropriate, should not be allowed for discourse in a school setting.

This requires some qualification. Controversial subjects when age appropriate should be presented in politically and ideologically neutral terms. A teacher's politics, or ideologies endorsed by faculty, admin or unions should not be taught without context and and the inclusion of viewpoint-diversity.

Schools should recognize and respect the views and beliefs of constituent groups, like people of faith, and respect that the primacy rights of moral, ethical and spiritual guidance belong to parents. And they should never undermine those sacred bonds of trust between parents and children by imposing their own politics.

It is unfortunate that in today's "culture wars," the discourse around identity is pitched as black-or-white. The questions above are phrased in a way to evoke a strong political statement (e.g., providing extra support or not to students based on certain characteristics). I don't believe teachers should be "directed" to focus on one set of demographics over another, but rather create a classroom environment in which everyone feels welcome and where reasoned discourse on why certain people (based on race, gender, orientation, etc.) have been historically and/or currently marginalized. As with hiring decisions, the argument often centres around hiring/promoting based on meritocracy vs. based on diversity characteristics. I don't believe anyone should be hired solely based on diversity; rather, they should be hired or promoted because they are the best candidate. It is a reality, however, that there are often more than one candidate who is a "best-fit," so under these circumstances, I believe it would be appropriate to look at diversity characteristics to ensure the people being served by educational institutions see themselves reflected in staff, and for staff to bring a diversity of experiences to schools. Regarding white supremacy, I don't believe it is overly present in schools. However, the legacy of racism persists (both intentionally and unintentionally) and that should be discussed in a school environment towards the ends of identifying a problem, not to put others down.

Safety in schools for students and educators.

Chanel Pfahl

I am running because as a former teacher I've seen firsthand how political activism has entered into schools and I am concerned that it is harmful to the students and to society at large.

I believe there is far too much emphasis these days on identity groups (dividing kids by race, gender identity, sexual orientation, etc.). Kids are now learning that society is made of the "oppressors" (white, heterosexual, male, etc) and the "oppressed" (black, LGBT, etc). I would like to see us focus more on our common humanity, and the importance of equality for all. Not only are these biased teachings fostering a victimhood mindset, but the extreme push for political correctness is hindering the development of critical thinking skills. Schools should be prioritizing core skill development (reading, writing, math, science), not ideology, in order that each student is prepared to succeed in life. I will look for opportunities to bring students, teachers, and administrations together in pursuit of their core mission of delivering educational excellence.

I am a person who isn't afraid to stand for what I believe is right, and I am open minded. If elected, these qualities will allow me to say what I think needs to be said even when it is unpopular, but also to listen to others who think differently.

Jessie-Lee Wallace

When I reflect on the last two-plus years—they have been an incredibly challenging time for everyone, but especially families. As a parent to a child in public school I saw this first-hand. Children and youth are still trying to catch up socially, emotionally, and scholastically. As part of my platform, I focus on getting students back to learning and thriving.

My hometown is Ottawa. I live with my family in the Glebe Annexe. I have a 15-year track record of community development and currently serve children and youth as a director in a city-wide charity. I am passionate and committed and have time to devote to this critical public service position. I have significant experience managing complex budgets, large teams, committees, and multiple relationships for positive community outcomes.

Here are a few of my platform areas:

- Reinstate extracurricular programs that build school communities and student development.
- Address overcrowding at schools. The Province dictates class sizes, yet there are still creative solutions we can apply at the Board and school levels.

- Support evidence-based learning resources and Covid safety protocols, including masking, improved ventilation, and vaccines per Ottawa Public Health guidelines.
- Connect with staff, community partners, and the City to help make school streets safer, especially for drop-off and pick-up times.
- Champion the #righttoread, and interventions like structured literacy programs to get children back on track after a tough two years.

The Ontario Human Right Commission released a report after ten years of study earlier this year. The report clearly showed that we are failing our young people. Before the pandemic, 26% of Grade 3 students were not meeting literacy standards, and 19% of Grade 6 students. * Over half of students with special needs were not meeting the provincial average. Similar results were also found in the Ottawa-Carleton District School Board.

Due to the pandemic, anecdotal results and outcomes are far worse for literacy, math skills, and social and emotional skills. If elected, I will be hyper-focused on helping close the learning gap for all children and youth in Ottawa, especially in Capital and Alta Vista Wards. We can create schools as safer spaces where all students thrive, especially 2SLGBTQ+ and racialized youth, but we need to do so together. To learn more, please visit: linktr.ee/jessieleewallace

As a family physician, I spend my days advocating for my patients. I am running for Trustee for the Ottawa-Carleton District School Board so that I can advocate for the broader Ottawa community. There is significant overlap in the issues that come up in healthcare and in education. My passion is standing up for people with disabilities, for LGBTQ2+ rights, for neuro-diversity, for families that live in poverty, for all children and youth to learn in safe, supportive classrooms. I believe strongly in equity, to ensure that every family has access to high quality, publicly funded education. No student should face discrimination on the basis of culture, religion, language, gender identity, sexuality, physical disability, learning disability, or neurodiversity. As a mother of three grown children, I also believe that we should teach the next generation to be empathetic, to be engaged citizens, and to fight for environmental responsibility and sustainability.

Nili Kaplan-Myrth

The questions as you have posed them are ambiguous. I cannot answer them the way they've been written.

I strongly believe that issues of systemic discrimination must be addressed in classrooms and educational institutions.

There should be affirmative action policies in every board of education to address gender biases, systemic racial discrimination, homophobia, transphobia, ableism, and other forms of discrimination in the hiring processes for teachers, for staff, for academic promotions. There should also be affirmative action policies for boards of education, to ensure diversity of those elected as Trustees.

We should call out all colonialism, racism, misogyny, homophobia, transphobia, and any other form of discrimination in classrooms and schools as well as boards of education.

I've been asked about the banning of books. Historically, literature is a target of political attack. I do not agree with the banning of books. However, materials that are historically problematic can ONLY be taught in the context of critical analysis. All students must be mature enough to engage in such a discussion, and educators must ensure the emotional and cultural safety of every student. This means that educators must be skilled. If they do not have the ability to discuss material critically, to analyze problematic discourse, they should be challenged.

Trans-identified and non-binary youth do not require parental consent to change their pronouns, their names, or their gender markers. They must be fully supported in school to be themselves, however they identify, at all times.

I recognize that discrimination based on race, ethnicity, gender identity, sexual orientation, and other immutable characteristics exists in society and that no institution is shielded from it. My answer to the question about special supports is not intended to deny that this is the case. However, I strongly believe that needs-based criteria and learning outcomes data (e.g. grades and standardized testing results) in a given area should be the basis for any decision about providing “extra attention and classroom supports” there. Making a priori assumptions about the need for academic supports on the basis of immutable characteristics seems imprudent to me.

I would also clarify that I would not try to change existing HR practices at the Board.

I have answered neutral to two questions which I thought would require me to have more information to provide a definitive answer.

What motivates you to serve on the school board (i.e., why are you running)? Is there a particular issue about which you are passionate that is part of your motivation to serve?

Matthew Lee

I believe in a proactive approach to our community's institutions. What this means is that rather than try to change them when you need them, be a part of their development before that point. As someone who has recently gotten married and am beginning to build a family (which will include kids), I want to guide the organization and structure of the schools where my kids will be educated at in the future. Especially in a governmental system where initiatives take years to get implemented, I am running in this cycle to start the ball rolling in time for my kids to see any such programs.

I believe that all students, regardless of their identity, should have the environment and opportunities to pursue their academic interests. I also believe that we should not be using identity or personal background as the basis for decision making or selections. While we do need to take into considerations how policy decisions will impact marginalized communities, policy development should focus on addressing common and underlying issues to alleviate the struggle of all students who face a given circumstance.

Maher Jebara

We need to encourage dialogue and to acknowledge that humans are not a monolith. We are a diverse group of beings and should not be sheltered or sensitive to open peaceful discussions on different topics and view.

What motivates you to serve on the school board (i.e., why are you running)? Is there a particular issue about which you are passionate that is part of your motivation to serve?

Peter Heyck

I am running for OCDSB Trustee because I want to engage with our community to build a school system that reflects local priorities and improves student achievement. My plan for student success includes:

1. Well-staffed schools with qualified teachers, appropriate resources and smaller class sizes
2. Restoration of school buildings so that schools are safe, clean and well maintained
3. Additional resources for students with special needs, and for their families
4. Education for all ages: from early childhood programs to classes for adults and seniors
5. Improved access to mental health resources for students and teachers

Cathryne Milburn

I have a passion for helping my community, communications, creativity, and advocating for education, mentorship, diversity, and inclusion.

I want to represent residents as the Ottawa-Carleton District School Board school board trustee in Zone 12 to help foster student achievement, well-being, and equity throughout students' school careers.

I want students and parents, tell me what they want to see in their schools, and I will advocate to bring their voices to the school board.
